Project sponsor: Xellon

The project sponsor is a real estate agency that also manages a photography company. The photography services complement the real estate business by offering vendors pictures of their properties. That side of the business is franchised to photographers and includes all equipment necessary (camera, camera poles, a van etc).

The project sponsor wanted to better manage the communications between themselves, their customers and the photographers. The resulting computer system allows Xellon to assign work to a photographer and supports workflow so that if a photographer refuses the work it can be assigned to somebody else. The work can be tracked through its various stages until the photographs are available to the client for viewing over the Internet. Clients then select the pictures they want and how they want them delivered: electronically, on CD, printed etc.

The software is a web application that uses ASP to link to an SQL server database.
